Main Findings of the Monitoring

The following trends were identified through media monitoring covering the period of May 6-12:

- Chair of Human Rights and Civil Integration Committee of the Georgian Parliament has been promoting hatred and indirectly encouraging violence on political grounds while assessing the facts of violence directed against the political opponents of the ruling party.
- Several key aspects of religious issues and discrimination on religious grounds were revealed: the rights of ethnic Georgians are more important than those of religious minorities (Zaza Papuashvili, Georgian Dream); the issue of constructing a Mosque in Batumi should be solved taking into account the will of the majority (Media Union Obiektivi); there is no religious extremism in Georgia and the problem is aggravated in order to obtain grants (Mamuka Giorgadze, People's Party).

Religious Discrimination

Maestro, Politmeter, May 10

Statements by Zaza Papuashvili, MP from the Georgian Dream Coalition, criticizing the National Movement and President Saakashvili are discriminatory against the different congregations in Georgia. There is a clear segregation on the side of the respondent talking about the right to conduct prayer [meaning instances when the Georgian Muslim citizens' were deprived the right to pray in several villages of Samtatskaro, Tsintskaro, and Nigvziani]: "You, take care of yourself", as stated with regards to Christian Orthodox citizens, and "they will take care of themselves" - concerning the Muslims. Journalist skips the respondent's statement failing to express any sort of criticism and raise a question on the equality of rights of minority and majority, as well as on the obligation of the State and the ruling team to protect the freedom of religion.

Indirect Encouragement of Violence

Incident at the Restaurant La Truffe

Two members of the Parliament from the National Movement and the former governor were injured in an incident that occurred between several citizens and the members of the National Movement, at the restaurant La Truffe, on May 11. Instead of clarifying the legal aspects of the event, Chair of the Parliamentary Committee on Human Rights and Civil Integration in her statements indirectly encouraged hatred and the “mob justice.” Almost all media outlets aired her comments.

Eka Beselia: “We will never encourage the violence or aggression. Government will act in response to the incident at La Truffe restaurant yesterday and the investigation will be conducted. However, I would like to remind the former high rank officials from the National Movement that they should have thought earlier that one day, when they stepped down from their positions they would meet people treated by them inhumanely and with exceptional brutality. These people, victims of their actions, would naturally express certain aggression and protest against them. ...And is this our government’s fault?”

The Georgian Democratic Initiative expressed its concern over the abovementioned statement made by the Head of Human Rights Committee. GDI released the statement on May 11:

GDI: “In addition we reflect on the statement made by the Chairperson of the Committee of Human Rights and Civil Integration of Parliament, Ms. Eka Beselia who on the one hand condemned the act of violence, and on the other hand her comment indirectly justified the fact of violence. We consider that statements of this nature are dangerous and might promote new wave of violence on political grounds.”

TV Company Maestro, May 12

Even though, within the frames of this project, Media Development Foundation conducts the monitoring of prime-time news programs, the organization acted in response to the airing of a questionable video initially spread in social network, by the TV Company Maestro, in News at 15.00 on May 12. The unverified video was shown as an original footage reflecting the incident at the restaurant La Truffe. Namely, the shots of a scene showing a man physically assaulting several women at one of the restaurants (most likely in Russia) was presented as a video documenting the physical confrontation between the members of the oppositional party and several citizens at the restaurant La Truffe in Tbilisi, on May 11.

MDF welcomed the apology by the TV Company Maestro offered afterwards, and called on media to show more caution when reproducing such questionable, suspicious information. “Materials appearing in social networks require additional verification in terms of accuracy and consistency with the facts. Furthermore, there was no extra effort required to clarify that the abovementioned video reflected the situation occurred abroad and has nothing to do with the incident that took place in Tbilisi”, as noted in the statement. MDF also reminded media outlets the Article 14 of the Code of Conduct for Broadcasters which obliges them to ensure the accuracy of information.

Religious Discrimination

Zaza Papuashvili, Georgian Dream:

"...Where on earth is the country they do care for? You come about pretending to protect other congregations' rights. You slam your own [country], tearing it down and spitting on it while claiming to care about others' prayers. How come their prayer was impeded? Let's help them promptly, or otherwise they won't be able to perform prayers. You mind your own affairs, and they will take care of themselves."

Obiektivi, Nights Studio, May 7

Obiektivi and the host of the Night Studio program Nino Ratishvili continue discussing the construction of a Mosque in Batumi in the light of the survey conducted by the Alliance of Patriots. At the same time, journalist considers the issue of a Mosque as a test for the new Government of Georgia. The editorial position of the media outlet and its journalist, that the issue of the minority's religious rights should be solved only taking into account the will of the majority, is quite explicit and shared by the respondent, the Chairman of the Imedi Party, Irina Sarishvili.

Nino Ratishvili: "95 percent of the population in Batumi is against the construction of the Mosque considering it unnecessary. Do you think, this is a test for the new government, will they take into account the position of the population or will they decide to build this notorious Mosque anyway?"

Irina Sarishvili, Imedi: "The stated position of the absolute majority of the population that they do not want this, by no means implies violation of anybody's religious rights, because there is a Mosque in Batumi and there is no need of building a new one. If 95 percent says no, this means that the 95 percent is not going to attend the mosque, and that's why they do not want it. And the government disregarding their position means that this democracy is also selective."

<http://obiektivi.net/tv1.php?id=11815>

Obiektivi, Night Studio, May 7

The leader of the People's Party Mamuka Giorgadze develops the thesis that the issue of a religious extremism is fictional and provoked by the HR defenders, in order to obtain grants [the respondent, without any additional arguments links such motivation with the acting National Security Advisor Giga Bokeria and his past affiliation with the Liberty Institute – non-governmental organization which then used to hold responsible the Orthodox priest Basil Mkalavishvili for a numerous attacks on religious minorities in Georgia].

Mamuka Giorgadze: "Giga Bokeria has been provoking Basil Mkalavishvili's people into beating him up in order to prove that he was the one in Georgia protecting the human rights and so on... they pushed the issue of protecting Jehovah's Witnesses to the extent that even the states in which Jehovah's sect is prohibited has been lecturing us."

In spite of the incorrect interpretation of facts by the respondent, the host Nino Ratishvili does not even try to clarify the facts.

Zaza Papuashvili:

"...Where on earth is the country they do care for? You come about pretending to protect other congregations' rights. You slam your own [country], tearing it down and spitting on it while claiming to care about others' prayers. How come their prayer was impeded? Let's help them promptly, or otherwise they won't be able to perform prayers. You mind your own affairs, and they will take care of themselves."

Ethnic Discrimination

Rezonansi, May 7

Newspepr Rezonansi published the information by the news agency Interpressnews concerning the accident in Batumi. The ethnicity of the person who died in an accident is identified as “Armenian” in the report, which is entirely irrelevant when describing the abovementioned fact - in an accident, the person fell from the fifth floor of the building in Batumi.

“The victim is Armenian and has been living at this address with his son for years.”

According to journalistic ethics and professional standard of media, identifying the person’s ethnic or religious origin is unacceptable when reporting the crime or any other accident if the person’s ethnicity or religion is not directly related to the fact. For instance, if something happens because of one’s religious faith or any other position, which is not the case in the above-mentioned incident. By publishing the agency’s information, Rezonansi newspaper shared the responsibility for the violation of the professional standard.

Kavkasia, Spektri, May 6

The guest of the talk-show Spektri, MP from the Georgian Dream Coalition Giorgi Gachechiladze regards the policy of the former government as directed against the Georgian people, discriminates on the basis of ethnicity, and segregates people and countries into categories.

Giorgi Gachechiladze: “This government should be brought to justice... they intentionally acted as enemies to Georgia and the Georgian people trying to eliminate them by all means, abuse, smash, and enslave them... or send them to prisons, force them out and replace them with the people of certain category... The National Movement introduced unilaterally the visa-free regime with 56 countries, and Mr. David, you should see what kind of countries are those - mostly of African and Asian states. They granted them the right to enter Georgia without visas, and that’s why this is happening now all over Georgia, but you see it very well.”

The host of the program shares the respondent’s view and continues to discuss the issue in the context of property disputes [namely, the reference is made to the confrontation over the pastures between the local population and private property owner foreign investors, in several regions of Georgia].

David Akubardia: “They [local residents] cannot drive their cattle to pastures.”

The respondent further builds on a thought considering the replacement of Georgians by Indians as a purposeful policy.

Giorgi Gachechiladze: “They intentionally deprived them of pastures, to drive them out forcing the peasants to leave the village... and then you would arrive, for instance to the region of Kakheti, and even though still being called Kakheti, it would be mostly populated by Indians.”

Gender Discrimination

Rustavi 2, Kurieri, May 10

The host of the talk-show Postion Nino Shubladze dicriminated on the basis of gender, while anounsing the guests of the talk-show in Kurieri at 9, referring to the studio guests as the representatives of the “weak sex.” This is a clear demonstration of sexism by journalist and reproduction of certain stereotypes as well.

Nino Shubladze: “Today, the representative of the “weak sex” [i.e. females] will face each other – our guests will be Eliso Chapidze from the majority and Irma Nadirashvili from the minority.”

http://www.myvideo.ge/?video\_id=2035273

Rustavi 2, Position, May 7

In a talk-show Position, concerning the illegal recording of private lives, one of the respondents, editor-in-chief of the Rezonansi newspaper Lasha Tugushi demanded the response from the studio guest Tamar Chergoleishvili for her husband’s work who happens to be the Secretary of the National Security Council.

Lasha Tugushi: “Where does this come from, Mrs. Tamar? Your husband is a Secretary of the National Security Council and are you asking me? Don’t you know what was going on in this system?”

In response, Tamar Chergoleishvili called on the opponent to respect the rights of women:

Tamar Chergoleishvili: “What does it have to do with my husband? Talk to me, please. I am not talking to you about your spouse, I am not interested who your wife is. I am here as an editor of the magazine, so please, talk to me as to the editor of the magazine. We live in a 21st century. Please, respect women.”

Obiektivi, Night Studio, May 9

In the Night Studio program dedicated to the Patriarchy’s initiative concerning the criminalization of abortion, the listener made a number of xenophobic statements, at the same time, focusing on the necessity of a strict state control over the migration policy. Journalist Tamta Rogava called on the respondent to focus on the main topic, however she failed to note the discriminatory essence of the listener’s statements.

Listener: “First of all, we have to act to solve the demographic problem... The government should impose a strict control over so many outlanders coming to Georgia, how they receive the citizenship and buy lands. Georgia is full of aliens.”

<http://obieqtivi.net/tv1.php?id=11841>

Obiektivi, Night Studio, May 10

The host of the Night Studio program Nino Ratishvili tries to thoroughly discuss the issues of property and Chinese Town with Koba Davitashvili of the Georgian Dream. However, the respondent discusses the topic only in the context of legal amendments, which is followed by journalist’s discriminatory comment that there will be no room left for Georgians in Georgia.

Nino Ratishvili: “Soon, there will be no place for us here.”

<http://obieqtivi.net/tv1.php?id=11855>

Nino Shubladze, Rustavi 2: “Today, the representative of the “weak sex” [i.e. females] will face each other – our guests will be Eliso Chapidze from the majority and Irma Nadirashvili from the minority.”

Publication of Illegal Video Recordings of Private Lives

Publication in social media of illegally recorded videos containing homosexual episodes and reflecting the intimate life of the human rights activist Giorgi Paresishvili has been covered by TV media from the angles of the right to privacy and accusations in corruption made earlier by Paresishvili against the high rank officials. However, there were several exceptions such as Media Union Obiektivi and newspaper Kviris Qronika, where respondents as well as journalists made numerous homophobic statements.

Obiektivi, Night Studio, May 7

Publication of the illegal video reflecting journalist Giorgi Paresishvili's intimate life is unacceptable for the host of the Nights Studio Nino Ratishvili and the leader of the political party Imedi, Irina Sarishvili. However, basing on homosexual scenes contained in the video, they make a number of homophobic statements.

Irina Sarishvili: "I don't want to be perceived as someone encouraging or defending this. No confusion should be made, since it cannot be ruled out that the people engaged in this are not fighting against homosexuals or heterosexuals, but rather strengthening their position. There are persons including myself for whom such people are unacceptable. Of course, this does not mean that I am going to kill them, but what can I do - this is not tolerable or moral for me, personally."

Nino Ratishvili: "Of course, this is unacceptable for me personally, and I do not want to have a relative or a friend of such orientation..."

The respondent goes on with speculations on religious issues claiming that abovementioned has happened during the Passion Week, makes remarks concerning the forced obligation to protect the rights of homosexuals deriving from the fact of publishing these intimate videos. The host shares the guest's position.

Irina Sarishvili: "These people should not have taken this step during the hardest day of the Passion Week. They should not have allowed the escalation of the hetero and homosexuals' issue to such degree, over the last several days. A person taking this step not only takes revenge on his personal enemy, but rather helps to create a compulsory mechanism for the society obliging it to defend those who do not need to be defended. In given circumstances, there was no need to protect them - people of such orientation. We all know where the entire world headed due to this problem."

Nino Ratishvili: "Yes, just on the contrary, they are serving their interests."

Kviris Qronika, 13.05 – 19.05

Journalist Khatuna Elbakidze refers to the representatives of sexual minorities with the humiliating term "pederasts", while also presenting their right to privacy in an extremely discriminatory discourse.

Sexual Minorities

Issue of sexual minorities also became topical with regard to the Day against Homophobia and Transphobia on May 17, in addition to the illegal videos spread in social networks. Coverage of the preparation for the rally has been negatively generalized in the prime-time news program on Imedi TV, which promoted the negative social attitude towards the planned event. Concerning the coverage of the rally in talk-shows, there was an important positive message - statement made by the Minister of Justice Tea Tsulukiani, in David Paichadze's program on Georgian Public Broadcasting. However, there was a number of extremely negative and homophobic statements by Media Union Obiektivi's respondents and journalists.

Imedi TV, Qronika, May 10

News story by Qronika focused on the preparation for the rally to mark the Day against Homophobia and Transphobia, on May 17. The story presents the positions of all sides – organizers of the rally, opponents, officials, and representatives of the society as well. However, the journalist's (Kety Brachuli) phrase – “large part of the society agrees, and almost all of them states that marking May 17 in front of the parliament building is unacceptable” – promotes the negative social attitudes. The vox pop conducted in the street neither methodologically nor professionally allow the journalist to extrapolate from and present the results of survey, as a position of the majority of the society.

At the same time, journalist identified the counter rally organizer Giorgi Gabedava, who essentially demanded the restriction of the fundamental human rights, as a HR defender, which cannot be justified in given circumstances. It was possible to introduce him simply as the representative of the non-governmental organization.

Maestro, News at 9, May 10

In contrast to Imedi TV, there were no incorrect assumptions and generalizations of public opinion concerning the intolerability of the rally. However, here as well, Giorgi Gabedava was identified as a human rights defender. The story was more balanced as well in terms of selection of respondents, if compared to Imedi TV.

Georgian Public Broadcasting, Dialogue, May 9

David Paichadze's program touched upon the new Labor Code, with the Minister of Justice Tea Tsulukiani in the studio. Although, at the end of the program the host raised a question on whether the new government would manage to pass the test on May 17, failed by the previous government. The statements by the Minister of Justice could be assessed positively.

Tea Tsulukiani: “Civilized people should not snoop each others' private lives and who sleeps with whom. This is the foundation of a civilized society. Things like this do exist and these people does not make this up. When a person wakes up with a thought and acknowledgement that ok, I am a minority, he/she should not be Kety Brachuli, Imedi: „Large part of the society agrees, and almost all of them states that marking May 17 in front of the parliament building is unacceptable“.

Sexual Minorities

beaten up or attacked for this. This is Barbaric. I believe, this is not the true face of Georgian society. The majority of our citizens share the view that violence is unacceptable.

Concerning the rally, right of assembly is guaranteed for everybody, unless they violate the law. If we agree in Georgia on two key principles that I mentioned – no to violence and everybody's right to privacy should be protected – then we all should undertake relevant obligations and commitments. “

At the same time, the Minister of Justice underlines the responsibility of the rally participants, calling on them to refrain from acting provokingly. However, the journalist fails to ask for clarification of what and who could be provocative, according to the respondent and whether there is a legal criteria for assessing such provoking actions.

Tea Tsulukiani: “In spite of my strong belief that the police will carry out its duty properly, the rally should not be provoking and irritating, since the one part of the society is already annoyed. I would call for moderation. I have not heard them demanding: “Come on, let us women get married, or let us men marry man.” I have only heard the single demand – stop assaulting and beating me up.”

Obiektivi, Night Studio, May 7

While discussing the issue of secret video recordings published in order to blackmail Giorgi Paresishvili, the Night Studio guest, leader of the Imedi Party Irina Sarishvili and the host Nino Ratishvili also touch upon the unacceptability of holding in Georgia the rally to mark the Day against Homophobia and Transphobia, on May 17.

Irina Sarishvili: “There is a radical resistance to the parade, and I stand by these radicals; Because it is absolutely unimaginable for me these people holding the parade while we have such grave human rights violations – even if we forget about other challenges, this may force the country into a huge political dilemma.”

The listeners of the program, in their phone calls to the studio, link the same sex marriage to Europe, and the May 17 rally to the US Ambassador to Georgia.

Listener: “Over more than a week, several foreign, mostly European radio stations have been spreading the information that the same sex marriage is allowed in some European states, for now. What would you say in this regard?”

Nino Ratishvili: “I would not want such a law adopted in my country.”

Irina Sarishvili: “I would like my country to remain as a country where such things are shameful. I am not saying more than that – it should be shameful and unacceptable for the society.”

Listener: “Moreover, please pay attention that the US Ambassador to Georgia has met and talked to this person [Giorgi Paresishvili] and now the sexual minorities announcing the parade on May 17, on Rustaveli Avenue – all this is interconnected. Let's stop lying to ourselves, it has nothing to do either with Khukhashvili or Garibashvili, well ok, maybe it does; but they have used every possibility to create a fertile ground for things that are in principle firmly unacceptable in Georgia. I don't like things like this happening in Georgia, I won't shake their hand, won't allow them into my house, I will never be friends with people like that, not a chance!”

Sexual Minorities

Host Nino Ratishvili shares the listener's position, considering homosexuality as immoral and anti-national.

Nino Ratishvili: "This is a natural reaction. This is perversion. Let's agree, I do not know how it works in France, any other European state or in the US, but here, for us it is perversion. Prostitution has already become a healthy sin."

In addition to homophobic statements, there was a hate speech on the side of the listener and the host allowed it to pass without any response.

Listener: "It is Sodomy according to the Holy Bible, and one should exile them to some island in the middle of nowhere, rather than protecting their rights and fondling them. Moreover, you should lock them in a prison cell, give them the life-long sentence, and hand over the Bible to read."

<http://obieqtivi.net/tv1.php?id=11815>

Obieqtivi, Nights Studio, May 10

The Night Studio program on May 17 rally is discriminatory against the rights of sexual minorities, due to the expressions made by host Nino Ratishvili and guest in the studio, leader of the People's Party Mamuka Giorgadze as well. Both host and the respondent are developing the idea that the rights of sexual minorities in Georgia are not being violated to the extent that creates the need of street protests ("The minimal standard is observed," Mamuka Giorgadze). In essence, such approach, whether the citizens have certain rights according to their sexual orientation, or any other affiliation is discriminatory, as well as the definition of the minimal standard offered by the respondent.

Nino Ratishvili: "Do you think that the rights of these people are violated to the extent that they need to express public protest?"

Mamuka Giorgadze: "The minimal standard is observed in the country. Nobody chases anyone in the streets because of their sexual orientation, nobody beats them and smashes their heads, and simply, there is no discrimination. Now, there is an artificial escalation of the situation, when people come out with entirely obscure demands 'let's defend the rights of sexual minorities' while facing no threat at all. In contrast, if you take a look at our mass media, beau monde, we are discriminated, our rights are being violated."

Respondent compares homosexuality with the lowest human instincts, while the host links the interests of minorities with those of criminals. This is an absolutely incorrect generalization that deepens further the negative attitudes towards the different minority groups. At the same time, the respondent justifies the violence against the sexual minorities promoting the hatred.

Mamuka Giorgadze: "It is much simpler to me, for a person of a normal orientation, to just make use of my fist rather than to think about the solution of the problem. That's why when the nastiest human instincts are being promoted in the country the first natural reaction of a normal person is to do whatever he can to prevent this."

Nino Ratishvili: "Interests of minorities, interests of criminals... Then I am just wondering if we are supposed to forgive Saakashvili, why we should not forgive those in prison?"

<http://obieqtivi.net/tv1.php?id=11856>

Nino Ratishvili: "Interests of minorities, interest of criminals... Then I am just wondering if we are supposed to forgive Saakashvili, why we should not forgive those in prison?"

Main Findings of the Monitoring

- The case of identifying ethnicity of the fatal accident victim was revealed, which is the violation of the professional standard of media (newspaper Rezonansi).
- Discriminatory statements on the ground of ethnicity were made by the respondents (Gia Gachechiladze, Georgian Dream), by the listeners live on air, (Obiektivi), and by the hosts (Kavkasia TV, Spektri, Obiektivi), within the context of criticizing the policies of the previous government.
- Two cases of gender discrimination were identified – first, by the journalist (Rustavi 2, Position), and second, by the respondent (Rezonansi, Editor-in-Chief).
- The issue of sexual minorities was topical in the contexts of publication of videos reflecting the intimate life and with regard to rally marking the Day against Homophobia and Transphobia on May 17. In addition to the homophobic statements made live on air by the respondents (Irina Sarishvili, Imedi Party, Mamuka Giorgadze, People's Party) and listeners (Obiektivi), there were cases of discrimination on the side of journalists (Obiektivi). The news program by Imedi TV, Qronika promoted the negative social attitudes toward the May 17 rally. Besides, the report contained several unjustified generalizations and assumptions, in violation of all methodological and professional standards.

Rezonansi, May 7

In contrast to Kvitis Qronika, Rezonansi publishes the facebook status of Paata Kurdadze, in which the issue is placed in an entirely different context. Kurdadze expresses the interest, why the publication of homosexual scenes is perceived as more problematic than the heterosexual shots, also contained in the published videos.

Paata Kurdadze: "I guess, there is another man and a woman in published videos. Why is nobody concerned with the publication of their intimate lives?"
